BOSTON'S FIRST AERIAL MAIL STARTS MONDAY

French War Plane Will Bring 4,000 Letters From New York to This City

Boston's first aerial mail is due to start from New York for this city on Monday.

Postmaster Murray received a communication today from President Alan R. Hawley of the Aero Club of America, notifying him that next Monday morning a French military airplane, piloted by Lieutenant Vanet, would leave New York for Boston, carrying 4,000 letters.

Among them will be some addressed to Postmaster-General Burleson and other federal officials at Washington and to French officials in Washington and New York.

Postmaster Murray is asked to forward these missives.

There will be a letter addressed to Postmaster Murray to add to his personal collection.

MOTHER OF 6 CHILDREN ADMITS BIGAMY CHARGE

Mrs. Carrie A. Gould of Somerville pleaded guilty in Boston Municipal Court today not only to bigamy, but to having used the name of her eighteen-year-old daughter, Miss Helen May Gould, to conceal her own identity in the bigamy trial.

She was married to Loring A. Gould of Clark street, Somerville, nineteen years ago, and has six children. A few weeks ago she left him and married Matthew Crawford, a nineteen-year-old hospital orderly, who in thirty-six, gave her age as twenty-two.

BANK MUST RETURN INTEREST TO FOSS

The Boston Penny Savings Bank must pay back to the estate of former Governor Eugene N. Foss $48,454, which the bank charged him for interest on a loan for $25,000, Judge Burke in the Municipal court ruled today that his trustees, to whom he made an assignment, could not receive the money.

AMERICAN RAID BELIEVE LOSSES ACHIEVED BY VOLUNTEERS ARE SLIGHT

32 Dugouts and a Bridge Blown Up; 20 Germans Put Out of Action

By International News Service.
 Washington, June 1.—The successful raid carried out in the Woerpe valley by American soldiers in the trenches, who killed or wounded twenty Germans and captured one machine gun, the committee, a continuation of last night's raid, is established that at least four first-line counter attacks on our new positions near Cantigny were made before noon on May 26.

The enemy airplanes referred to as brought down in the communication of May 31 was an Albatross biplane, which was shot down at 1,500 meters by Lieutenant Douglas Campbell in the region north of Toul. Both pilot and observer were killed.

"In the Woerpe, in the early morning of May 31, a raid on the German lines was carried out by volunteers and technical parties. The raiding party blew up thirty-two dugouts and a bridge, killed and wounded more than twenty of the enemy and brought back a captured machine gun."

CREEL CHALLENGES CRITICS IN CONGRESS

Washington, June 1.—George Creel, chairman of the committee on Public Information, challenged hostile members of the House today in committee to point a single act of any person ever remotely connected with his bureau that "is soiled by political prejudice."

In a letter to Chairman Fow, in response to a request for the personal notes of his bureau, Creel said he would like to have charges of political malice and partisanship in the committee's work thrown out as soon as may be. "Not only does it weaken the work of this committee," Creel wrote, "but it shames the thousands of devoted men, Democrats and Republicans alike, who are giving their lives wholeheartedly to the committee's work."

ALLIES WIN SOUTH OF SOISSONS

By ERNEST P. ORR, International News Service Staff Correspondent

Paris, June 1.—The Germans facing the allies on the left flank of the Aisne-Marne battle front have been thrown back upon the Crise River and the French have retaken Chacrise and Vierz, south of Soissons, by a series of powerful counter attacks, the French War Office announced today.

The French captured several hundred prisoners.

Germans have failed to extend southward their gain on the Marne. All efforts to force a crossing were repulsed.

The Germans now hold a front of about thirteen miles on the northern bank of the Marne, between Vereneuill and Chateau Thierry.

On the line between Dormans and Rheims fresh fighting has developed, but Rheims still remains in the hands of the allied forces.

Dormans is eighteen miles southwest of Rheims on the Marne. British forces are fighting with the French near Rheims.

ARE YOU A CIVIL RIGHTS MAN?

ARE YOU A CIVIL RIGHTS MAN?

The cry of the laborer in heard through the State.

There are going to be no more more men in the blue coat have got to get a visible means of existence. Everybody, meaning every man between eighteen and fifty years of age, has got to go to work.

He can issue a proclamation at will that the employment of any man is necessary for the protection of the public. If you are a laborer you've got to go out and do your bit for at least 10 hours a week.

It's all of the smooth-shaven, well-dressed gent whose hardest manual labor is going up to the ball game afterwards and selling out to I that has labor will not get a two-bagger. Likewise, the pinch-backed negro, heard or seen, whose only means of support is to go to the nearest city or beach dance hall.

POLICE ARE NO HAPPY.

The police are smiling because it will clear off the Washington and Tremont street sidewalks of the laborer who now drags themselves along the sidewalk, and who now has to spend hours of his life in the gutter, and who now has to spend hours of his life in the gutter, and who now has to spend hours of his life in the gutter.

Whether you are of the under crust or the upper crust, it makes no difference to the law. Some of these who spend their days telling how the world would be won over a highball at the fashionable country clubs or city law law, are also in the gutter.

"Drink Milk and Be Patriotic," Urges Dr. Gilbert, New England Administrator

Having read in a Boston newspaper the account of two citizens' names appearing in the Harvard roll of honor table unveiled at the "Comings University Memorial Day," John J. Chapman of New York, sent a telegram to President A. Lawrence Lowell asking him to call attention to the list of names of his son Victor, the famous aviator killed at Verdun two years ago while taking a course in the Harvard flying school.

Roger Peck, secretary of the Harvard Corporation, today explained that there were no names of Harvard College men, who died fighting for Germany, on the roll of honor table unveiled at the "Comings University Memorial Day," because the names of the Harvard men who died fighting for Germany were on the roll of honor table unveiled at the "Comings University Memorial Day."

How Rooms Must Be Hired Under the True Name Bill

YOU must yourself write in the register your true name, or the name you are ordinarily known by.

You must also, yourself, write in the register your residence.

You must write the true name and residence of every person who occupies the private room with you.

You cannot occupy a private room unless you have written your name and residence in the register.

By a private room is meant any room containing a bed or couch, not a dining room.

You can't treat this law by letting anybody else write a false name or residence for you, or by convincing it will cost you from $10 to $25 for each offense.

If you rent private rooms habitually for immoral purposes he or she can be fined from $100 to $1,000 and costs, or six months in jail or both fine and imprisonment.

The landlord must keep the register for inspection by officers at least one year after the last name has been entered.

THE NEGLECTED CHILDREN

Mother Forced to Work on Account of High Cost of Living, Says Whitman

By CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

We Americans have thought that we could escape at least one of the horrors of the war—the suffering of children.

We shudder when we hear of the outrages that have been inflicted on the babies of Belgium and France. The strongest of us cannot keep back the tears of sympathy that come when we think of motherless fatherless babies left to starve in the "wasted" lands of the countries; of those little tots who have been mutilated by the barbarous hands of the Germans, with minds bewildered, bodies stunted and no future except the darkness of a perpetual childhood before them.

Americans have thought that the war could not bring us suffering of this kind—and to a certain extent it cannot. But even here, far away from the actual scenes of the conflict, our children are suffering, and as a direct result of conditions due to the war.

BLAME IS ON PARENTS.

"The suffering of our children isn't due to the horrors inflicted by the enemy. It is due more or less to the neglect of parents, than more than any others, should have the care of their babies at heart," said Alfred Whitman, the secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, to whom I went for information.

"When we went into the war," said Mr. Whitman, "the number of children that have been referred to us has increased alarmingly, of course, there are other conditions that may be responsible for this increase, but the war comes to our minds first, and it is the war that it really is blame."

"The cost of living, that has increased so enormously in the last few years, is the force that draws the king of unfortunate things that interfere with the good conditions that have previously existed. It is harder for large families to take themselves properly, and as a result, malnutrition, among the children is growing very prevalent.

FAMILIES NEED MORE MONEY.

"This high cost of living may be blamed, too, for the feeling many mothers have that they must go out and earn their bread. Where the salary of one was needed before, two are now needed in many cases, to supply the needs of the same number of people, in spite of the increased cost of many things that have come into being.

"And though we admire the women for going out to work, and for taking up lines that have been left to them previously, for doing their bit, as we say, we cannot help wondering what is going to happen to the babies that are left at home, to take care of themselves, or to be cared for by eight-year-old Mary, the little sister of the family, who, by the way, is growing old before her time, and losing the childhood that every one of us was born to have."

"That is the result of the entrance of women into the field of work that we are granting them so much for, but in nine cases out of ten, when the money that the mother makes through her labor isn't actually necessary to keep life going in the bodies of herself and her children, she is doing more harm than good to the country."

CANNOT BLAME CHILDREN.

"We can easily see how children left to themselves will grow up irresponsible, with no sense of the obedience to and respect for elders that will make them the good citizens. We cannot blame them for the delinquencies that are bound to develop."

"And yet mothers and thinking mothers, do not stay at home to provide the wherewithal for the little babies that will do their children no good if they are not brought up in the way that they should go—only a mother can bring them up."

"These conditions are serious, and there are hundreds like them, throughout Mr. Whitman. "We don't get a great many of them, for all of us, but it does come under the head of neglect. Some factories that employ women maintain day nurseries for the care of the children. There are day nurseries in connection with various charities, and there are even day nurseries that will watch out after the little ones while their mothers are at work."

Congress Will Be Asked to Make Conditions the Same in All the States

By C. F. DONCKER.

At the annual meeting of the directors of the American Automobile Association at Atlantic City, several important recommendations were made to the government. Because of the enormous increase of motor truck transportation and passenger car travel on account of war conditions, the directors decided to urge Congress to pass a federal uniform traffic law which will harmonize the regulations of the several States, particularly in reference to weight of loads, registration of vehicles and operators, and mile-per-hour limitations.

A measure now being drafted will be introduced in Congress and undoubtedly will be referred to the committee of the two branches having to do with interstate commerce.

In recognition of the acute governmental need for skilled automobile operators and mechanics, a resolution calls upon the motorizing public generally to drive their own cars, as far as possible, but to equip their vehicles with such necessary supplies as maps, repair tools, and spare parts, which are in such short supply, and to a minimum, thereby co-operating with the government in the training of motor mechanics through the maintenance of schools for this specific purpose.

Motor vehicle liability, which has become an unmitigated evil, was thoroughly discussed and plans made to co-operate with both federal and state police officials in bettering the situation which has assumed widespread proportions.

"The tendency of road tar in sticking to the mud guards and running gear of an automobile is well known to motorists and it has always been the bane of the motorist. A new auto polish has been recently put on the market in Boston by Farley & MacNeil, No. 155 Federal street. This product, called 'Vaseline' and it is claimed by the distributors that it is more effective, and it certainly should prove more to motorists.

Among their claims for Vaseline is that it is more effective, and it certainly should prove more to motorists. It is more effective, and it certainly should prove more to motorists. It is more effective, and it certainly should prove more to motorists.

THE HUMAN ENEMY

—To stop at a little village; to see the peaceful life, the lovers with their gentle wooing, the twilight minstrels under the faithful moon, the happy homes, the contented villagers.

—And then!

—Hear war's alarms; see the troops go marching off, sweethearts parted; husbands, fathers, under arms; hear the tread of tramping legions, the thrust and roar of battle, the gallant charge, the massed combat.

—And

—In the village the coming of the horde of Huns, the spray of shrapnel and the terrible shock of shell.

Hub Fandom Out to Bid Hearty
Welcome to Braves—Dana
Fillingim Slated to Twirl

By NICK FLATLEY.

The opening Braves opened up today at home. They were due for a royal welcome, being the sensations of 1918 baseball, something after their manner four years ago.

They have rocked out of last place, and are apparently rocketing up to top of the pennant. Out on the trails they have spread the sister and desolation. They drubbed everybody they met.

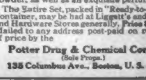

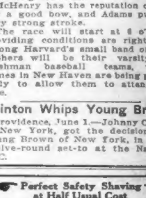

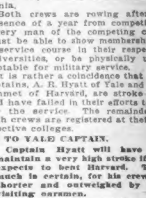

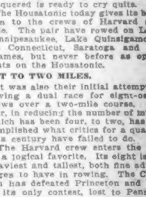

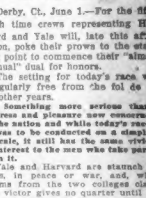

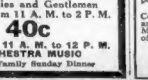

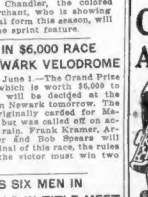

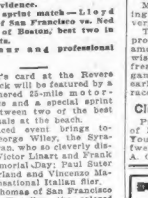

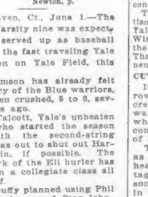

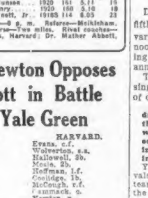

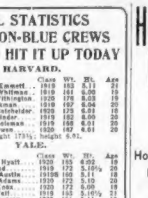

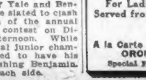

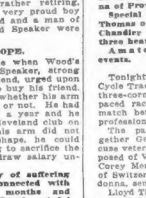

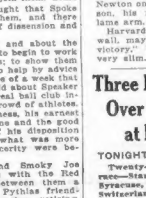

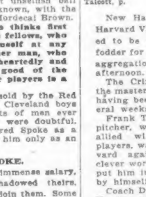

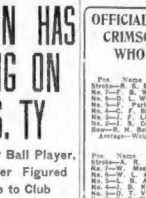

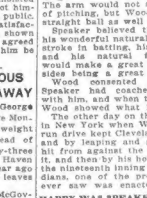

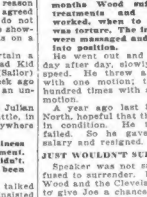

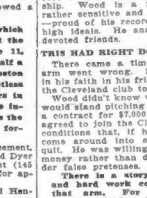

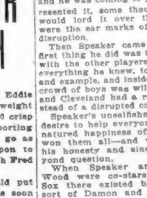

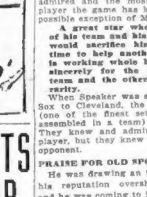

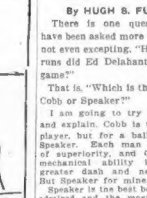

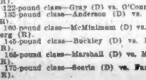

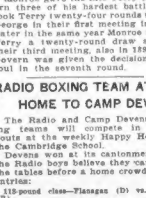

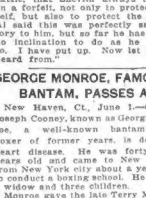

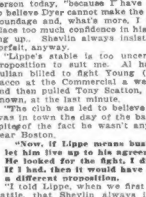

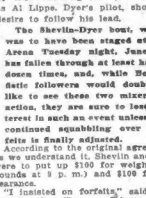

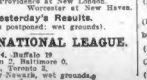

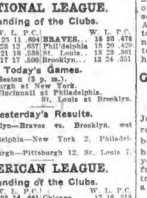

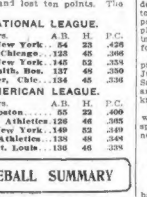

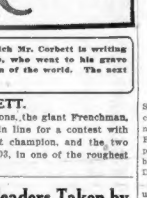

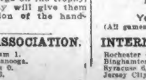

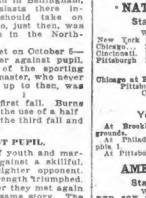

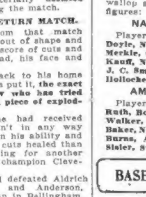

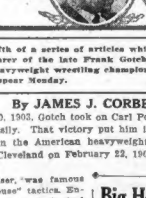

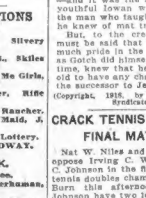

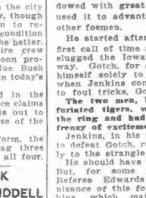

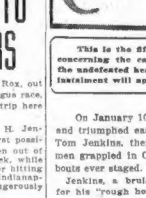

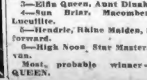

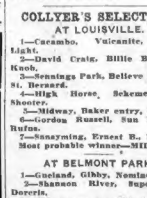

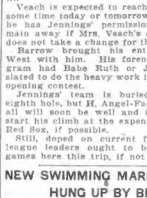

ON, BOY! ALL'S WELL.
When the East invaded the West the standing of the leaders and the Braves were:

Glenn Won 1st Lost 3
Bryant Won 2nd Lost 2
The following are as follows:
Glenn Won 1st Lost 3
Bryant Won 2nd Lost 2

After the Cubs, who Western teams visit the Home of Big Things, this stand will just about break the local out in a baseball way.

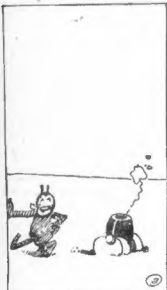

Two new pitchers, so to speak, will perform during the present series. Phil Fillingim and Dana Fillingim will be in the West, and Dana Fillingim will be in the West, and Dana Fillingim will be in the West.

A Suggestion About Thrift Stamps

Try It Yourself, and Perhaps Later the Government Will Adopt It

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

The sale of Thrift Stamps will continue throughout the war. Already it is returning to the Government a steady income. Patriotic boys and girls are doing splendid service in selling them.

Firemen, policemen, postmen, hundreds of public employees, are helping.

Incidentally the plan is doing much to teach young and old to save, and is convincing thousands of the desirability of owning a financial interest in the United States Government.

A friend who is one of the most insatiable Thrift Stamp collectors among our acquaintance makes a suggestion concerning Thrift Stamps which we think is valuable.

He says that the card supplied by the Government is too large to fit easily in the pocket.

The average collector, who leaves the card at home, is a little puzzled as to what to do with the stamps he buys from boys and girls or policemen or firemen or postmen on the street.

Then the stamps can be conveniently stowed away.

He believes, and so do we, that if this were done many more people would invest in stamps.

Instead of slipping them into envelopes, where they may be easily lost, or dropping them between the pages of notebooks—which very few persons carry—they would have a place awaiting them, and every vacant space on the card would suggest to the owner the need of a stamp to cover it.

It may be that the Treasury Department will see the value of this suggestion and adopt it.

We trust that it will.

In the meantime, every Thrift Stamp collector ought to provide himself with a card of vest-pocket size, on which to stick the stamps he buys.

They can easily be transferred afterward to the larger cards now furnished by the Government.

In that way more stamps will be purchased, more money will be saved, and more money will be turned into the Government when it needs every cent that can be secured to carry on the great business of organizing and winning victory.

Now Is the Time to Teach Spanish in Schools

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

Germany has in the past had much of the South American trade which of right belongs to the United States.

With her customary high-handed disregard of the rights of any and all nations Germany has now sacrificed this trade.

It should not go back to her after the war, and it will not go back to her if the United States will put forth the right sort of effort to win it.

This is one of the many reasons why the teaching of Spanish in the public schools, as suggested by Mayor Ryan of New York, is an excellent thing.

Without many Americans who can speak Spanish merchants will be unable to secure the right men to go after this trade.

Naturally the merchants of the South American republics would prefer to talk business to men without the aid of interpreters. They will give the preference, of course, to men who know Spanish.

The youth of any city who learn this language will find it immediately profitable, for it will lead to good positions and big business opportunities.

Spanish is worthy of study on its own account, for the language has a great and beautiful literature. It is far less difficult to learn than many other European languages, and its mastery is a long step toward the mastery of Italian and the other Latin tongues.

A Great Gift Is Put to a Great Purpose

Fortunate is John McCormack in his wonderful voice. Noble is the use he makes of his great gift of song. He raised $100,000 for the Red Cross on his recent tour for the overseas work of that organization. He is to sing in Mechanics Hall tomorrow evening, June 2, in aid of the Knights of Columbus war fund. He has started to raise $50,000 for it.

Few are the men endowed with voices like McCormack, whose "swallow-flights of song" lift audiences out of every-day cares and bear them upward into high realms of veritable ecstasy. In times of peace such voices give infinite pleasure. In this time of war McCormack smoothes his voice by patriotic use. Nor does he content himself merely with singing to help a war fund from the purses of others. He is paying one thousand dollars for tickets for twenty soldiers from a Camp Devens hospital, who are to be present at the concert Sunday evening. This is at the rate of twenty times the scheduled price for these tickets.

WHEN THE WIFE IS ALL DOLLED UP

Wives, if your husbands want you to be well dressed and are willing to pay for it, do not disappoint them.

The husband with this desire takes pride in having his wife look well and it shows an interest in the wife, which should be appreciated.

There are wives who, although provided with good clothes, are not careful in taking care of them.

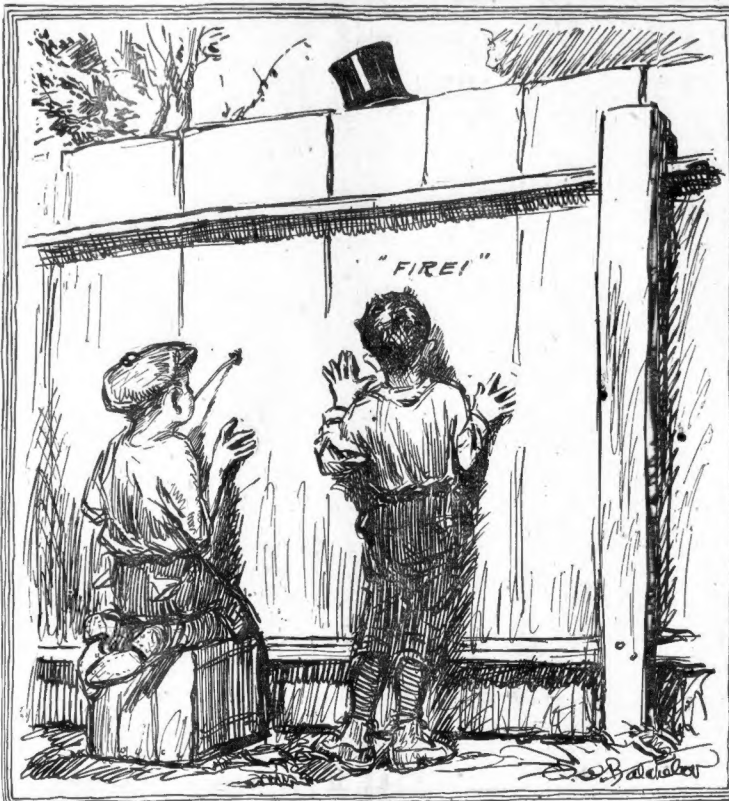

Their wearing apparel is wrinkled or soiled or not properly worn.

Children, this state exists don't blame a husband for feeling that it is a waste of money to provide good clothes.

The result is loss of interest and loss of opportunity to appear in public as husband's company.

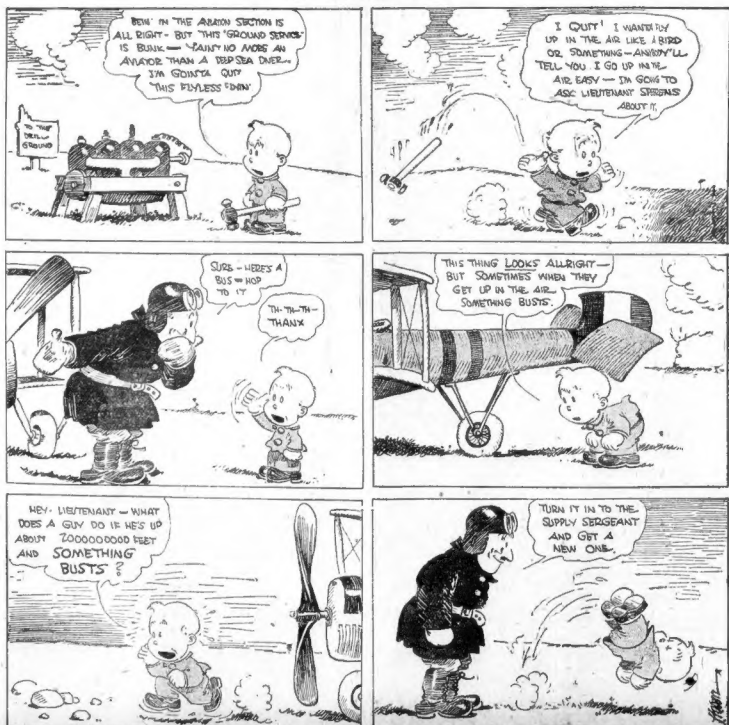

It is good for a wife to keep her husband proud of her, and she cannot be too particular to make a neat appearance for her own sake also.

AMBITIOUS SECRETARY LAMENTS LOT

By Winifred Black

I read your article about secretaries today. May I presume upon your newspaper friendship to tell you a tale of woe?

It seems that there is always a vacancy for a really good secretary, but though I have hunted high and low I cannot find that this is true.

I am now secretary to the president of a large business agency. He encouraged me and I saw a rosy vision of my future. However, after powers in the organization will not give me the opportunity I need, so the only thing for me to do is to move on. You know, no matter how ambitious or confident one is, it hurts to be set on so thoroughly.

I get $15 a week and cannot start elsewhere for less. There is nothing for me where I am; things are showing up, and I cannot endure idleness.

Perhaps you can give me a little advice as to how to go about locating those people who would give anything for a "nifty-usue per cent. secretary." K. U. L.

THERE is, it is just as it came in the mail, well-written, simple, direct and real, and yet, somehow, I can't understand K. U. L. at all. What are you thinking of, K. U. L.? Don't you see that your president of the large business agency is one of the very persons who will give a great deal for a ninety-nine per cent. secretary? He has shown that already, and now the way you are rewarding him for the chance he is trying to give you, is to be hurt and humiliated and discouraged.

By him!

Not at all. By someone else in the company who's probably jealous of you. Is that fair to your employer? Is it fair to your own chance, and is it really fair to the poor little jealous, warped creature who can't bear to see you get ahead? If you let her—or him, as the case may be—push you out of the office, the next person who comes in to take your place will have exactly the same fight to make, and then that person will be discouraged and go, and so the mean, petty little story will go on and on with never any decent, sensible ending to it.

"A rosy vision of your future?" Well, why not go on having it? And better still, why not turn that rosy vision into a rosy reality? You can do it if you want to, and work hard enough. Who is it who's determined not to let you get a chance? Some jealous little stenographer who has the ear of the office manager? Don't be so sure of that. The person who tells you that she is trying to get you out of your job may be the very one who is trying to get you out herself.

The president of the company is trying to give you a chance. If you haven't the self-control and the common sense and the tact to get along with the rest of your fellow employees, he's quite right in thinking that you haven't the self-control and the tact and the character to get along in the position you're so anxious to have and to hold.

THE MAN WHO WINS (Author Unknown)

THE man who wins is an average man; Not built on any peculiar plan; Nor blessed with any peculiar luck—Just steady and earnest and full of pluck.

"When asked a question he does not 'guess'; He knows, and answers 'No,' or 'Yes'; When set a task that the rest can't do He buckles down till he's put it through.

"So he works and waits till, one fine day, There's a better job with bigger pay; And the men who shirked whenever they could Are beset by the man whose work made good.

"For the man who wins is the man who works, Who neither lingers nor troubles his chinks; Who uses his hands, his head, his eyes— The man who wins is the man who tries."

GETTING RID OF A JOB BY BAD TRAITS

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

We are always told that our success in life depends on devotion to our chosen work and that faithful application which leads to the mastery of it. And that is all true, especially for those whose work does not bring them in contact with others.

For instance, the personality as appearance and peculiarities of writer amount to practically nothing, so far as his or her work concerned, while they count enormously with an actor or an actress.

They count in any occupation which brings the employer and the employee in close touch.

I have a letter from a girl who is perplexed and discouraged because she is failing to succeed in her work. She says she is a good stenographer and typist, but continues:

"Please tell me how I can better myself. I work hard from 8:30 to 5:30. I do want to succeed in the business world, and I wish you would give me a few suggestions. For every position I get I am fired within a week. What is the matter with me?"

Simply Horrid

Then she adds in a very feminine postscript: "I look simply horrid in waists and skirts. So what kind of dresses would you advise me to wear? I can spend my full salary for my clothes, if I want to."

Why don't you wear the one-piece frocks, with the sheer collars and cuffs that are so much in evidence just now? Of course you want to look very nice, with your hair and skin and teeth and hands all cared for, and your feet well shod. But don't mix correct office clothes with afternoon-tea things.

And you are foolish to spend your entire salary on your clothes. Save a bit, and have the fun of making your own investments.

And now to go back to the mournful fact of your perpetual and persistent "driving." If your work is as good as you say it is, I am sure that the reason you fail to keep a job is some fault of disposition, or some personal peculiarity or habit which is annoying to an employer, and which you could easily overcome if your eyes were once opened to it.

Just by way of illustration, I was in the West at one time and working very hard on the last of a book. It wasn't going easily. In fact, it was going just as badly as it possibly could. And it simply had to be finished by a certain time. My difficulties were further complicated by the fact that I was working with an unknown stenographer who was not used to my methods any more than I was used to hers.

Impressed Favorably

The first one I had impressed me most favorably. She was very quick and highly intelligent. But we had not been working ten minutes before I discovered that she had a maddening peculiarity, she snuffed as regularly and as steadily as a clock ticks, and she seemed quite unconscious of it. At first, I thought she had a cold, but she assured me she never was guilty of them. I couldn't frame a sentence to save my life. I waited only for that next snuff. The situation became agonizing. She was a nice girl, but we had to part.

So you, my dear, puzzled by your many dismissals, will probably find the reason for them lies in some irritating little peculiarity similar to those which I have mentioned.

SHELL SHOCK AND WAR STRAIN

The term shell shock has made many persons believe that it is due to the profound impression or shock produced on the nervous system by the detonations of high explosives. No doubt, there are cases of actual brain or nerve injury due to concussion of the air accompanying shell explosions, but these mechanical causes are a great deal less frequently responsible for war neuroses than the mental effects of general war strain.

It is remarkable that these war neuroses, common as they are among private and officers alike, are seldom found in men who have been actually wounded. Perhaps this seeming anomaly is due to the actual wound shock affecting the mental impression affecting the controlling nervous system in such cases—Popular Science Monthly for June.
